The demonstrations have led to unheard-of violence to the point that the authorities have requisitioned the supply points for gasoline, to reserve them for medical emergencies, police, gendarmerie. Un curfew was even put in place last weekend, given the extent of the looting of some thugs whose anger was expressed by sabotage and violence and aggression towards certain citizens. A general faint that coincided with that of the French in Metrople, since the two Saturday 17 and 24 November. This correpson has a simultaneity of the opening of the Yellow Vests between France metropolis, versus the island of the Reunion, territory Outre Mer Francais. In an interview with Franceinfo, in Paris, in the middle of the day, the Minister of Overseas has reaffirmed her desire to meet the Reunionese "throughout the country", starting with "the first yellow vests" that she will meet on the dam that filters since November 17 access to Roland-Garros airport in Saint-Denis. The Minister Annick Girardin also announced that it would bring "answers on employment and purchasing power" to the multiple and vague claims of "Yellow Vests" Reunion.
